

Uh oh, What was I thinking? What Not to Do!

Use common sense. Don't do something that your parents would not normally let you do.

Do not sit on the Thrones.

Do not play with ANY Royal regalia.

Do not play with things that do not belong to you. (Crowns, Coronets, cloaks, banners, etc)

Do not sit in someone's chair until you are invited. If you are not asked to sit down but it is apparent that you will be there for quite some time then it is appropriate to ask to sit down. Do not choose your own seat. Let your host offer one to you.

Do not partake in their food or drinks until you are invited and then only take what you will eat. Please remember to say thank you.

If you are running messages or errands then you will probably be given an area to relax until you are needed. Do not leave that area unless you have notified your employer.

If you are escorting someone then stay close by so you can hand them their drink, basket, bag, etc. Do not lag too far behind and do not move ahead of your employer.

If you were hired to carry a banner carry the banner as directed by your employer. Do not swing, twirl, drag or drop the banner. It is not a toy.

If you are assisting a fighter be ready when they come from the field of battle with water and towel if they supply them. Take their sword and gear as they remove them and place them where the fighter is storing these items. Do not play with their armor or weapons.

Discussion: What can you add to this list?
